ALCOA CORPORATION NAMED LEADER IN WORLD INDEX FOR DOW JONES SUSTAINABILITY INDICES

Sep 26, 2017

PITTSBURGH--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Alcoa Corporation (NYSE:AA), a global leader in bauxite, alumina and aluminum products, has been named a leader in the annual Dow Jones Sustainability Indices (DJSI) a recognized source for corporate responsibility and sustainability.

In its first year as an independent company, Alcoa Corporation is included in the prestigious DJSI World Index. Alcoa's former parent company was listed as a sustainability leader for 15 consecutive years.

"Alcoa Corporation attributes its inclusion in the Indices to the ongoing dedication of our employees across the globe," said Michelle O'Neill, Senior Vice President of Global Government Affairs and Sustainability. "Our corporate values, which are to act with integrity, operate with excellence, and care for people, drive our daily commitment to reducing the impact of our operations and increasing the value we bring to society."

The Dow Jones Sustainability Indices are the longest-running benchmarks to assess the sustainability performance of the world's largest companies. Alcoa is included as a mining and metals leader in categories such as environmental performance, corporate governance, risk and crisis management, climate strategy, human capital development, and social impact.
