"We are proud to be recognized for the transparency of our environmental reporting in the Carbon Disclosure Project," said Bob Fatovic, who oversees Ryder's environmental, health, and safety functions and is the Company's Executive Vice President and Chief Legal Officer. "Whether it's deploying alternative fuel vehicles, optimizing distribution networks, or operating energy-efficient warehouses, Ryder helps customers reduce emissions and drive long-term value for their businesses."

The Company earned its position on the index by achieving a perfect score of 100 in disclosing carbon emissions and energy data through CDP's climate change program. The top 10 percent of companies independently assessed against CDP's scoring methodology constitute the CDLI. At the request of 822 investors who represent US$95 trillion in assets, thousands of companies submit annual climate disclosures to CDP. Top scores indicate a high level of transparency in the disclosure of climate change-related information, providing investors with a level of comfort to assess corporate accountability and preparedness for changing market demands and emissions regulation.

When businesses outsource these critical functions to Ryder, they can tap into the Company's expertise, infrastructure, and investment in the latest technologies to make them more efficient and environmentally responsible.
