West Colton Rail Terminal Adds Additional Truck Loading Bay

2/10/2011

West Colton Rail Terminal has just completed the installation of a third truck loading bay. This project was executed to provide for increased system reliability and truck loading availability, as the terminal moves forward through this phase of operation. In addition to the new bay installation, the two original bays have been outfitted with improved air elimination systems along with various modifications to improve individual loading bay reliability. The terminal is now poised to meet the growing demands for ethanol distribution in California's Inland Empire area.
